HOW A STUDENT MAY MAKE GOOD

Rev. Frank L Wells Delivers Message to Audience of Young Men.

TEST OF LAWFUL PLEASURE

Restraint, Conviction and Devoutness of Daniel as an Example.

"I wish I might have framed and put in the room of every student in this city the words of Mrs. Susannah Wesley to her son when he was in She wrote to him, 'Would you judge the lawfulness of the unlawfulness of pleasure, take this rule: Whatever weakens your reason, impairs the tenderness of your conscience, obscures your sense of God, takes off your relish for spiritual things; whatever the constant of the constant o increases the authority of the over your mind; that thing is sin unto you, however innocent it may seem in itself." Thus spoke Rev. Frank L. Wells to a specially invited audience of students at the Broad Street Methodist Church last evening. His subject was "A Student Who Made Good."

Daniel, first chapter, eighth verse:
"But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself." "Daniel;
he said, "was one of a group of four he would not defile himself." "Daniel," he said, "was one of a group of four young men chosen by the King of Babylon to become students in preparation for public service. In the midst of luxury and corruption he attained pre-eminence and power through the strength of his character. The story of his life is essentially one of a student who made good."

Must Learn Restraint.

Emphasizing the part played by self-restraint in the career of the biblical hero, Mr. Wells said: "Every man who aspires to do and be anything worth while in the world, must come to aspires to do and be anything worth while in the world, must come to realize the place of restraint in his life. There are two voices that speak within us. One is the voice of a King and the other is the yelp of a beast. The voice of the King calls to high things and bids us be masters in a world of splendid service. The voice of the beast calls for self-indulgence. It says, 'Have a good time at any cost. Be a free man in a free world.' In free man in a free world words, it calls for license."

Be a free man in a free world. In other words, it calls for llossne."

"It was related recently of a great surgeon that he gave up playing base-ball, not because he felt that playing ball was wrong, and not because he thought it undignified. He was very fond of the game. He loved to play it. But he came to realize that playing baseball so hardened and toughened his hands that it affected the delicacy of his touch and rendered him less ready for work. He aspired to the best and was willing to put restraints upon himself to follow his ideal."

Fixity of Furpose.

The second great characteristic of Daniel's character, declared the speaker, was his spirit of conviction. He did not declare a purpose one day and give it up the next.

"It took something of courage," said Mr. Wells. "Babyion was notoriously bad. It was a place of splurging sinfulness. The life at the court where baniel was in training, was enchantingly luxurious to one with a worldly mind. But Daniel's life in Babylon was a rebuke to those who claim that they cannot maintain their integrity because of their circumstances. Thest because of their circumstances.

they cannot maintain their integrity because of their circumstances. Think of the circumstances he faced. Think of the many voices that called him from his high position. But he was a young man of conviction and he stood firm."

ity, Mr. Wells quoted the follow-passage from Mark Twain's de-tion of ruined Pompeii: "Perscripton of ruined Pompeli: "Perhaps the most poetical thing Pompeli has yielded to modern research is that grand figure of a Roman soldier, clad in complete armor, who, true to his duty, true to his proud name of Roman soldier, and full of the stern courage which had given that name its glory, stood to his post by the city fate, erect and undinching till the free fate, erect and undinching till the free courage which had given that name its glory, stood to his post by the city gate, erect and unflinching till the fire that raged around him burned out the dauntless spirit it could not conquer."

Was Devout,

"The third thing to be noticed in Daniel's character," said Mr. Wells, "was his devoutness. He had been taught it, no doubt, back in his old home. Maybe his father was a man of prayer. I am convinced that his mother was a devout woman.

"When we are young it seems easy to be devout. The child's mind has the very wonder of the world to work in it reverence. Thus Wordsworth speaks of the ch'ld as having in his heart 'the murmur of the sea that brought him hither; of standing in the light (that never was on land or sea,' the light that all too early fades into the light of coming day."

"Determine to have in your life," concluded the minister, 'the spirit of restraint, the spirit of conviction, the spirit of devoutness, and under the favor of God you can come to a large place of usefulness; you may win success in the largest sense of the word."

cess in the largest sense of the word.

Chesapeake and Ohio Officials Make Important Announcements.

With part of his official family, Presapeake and Ohio Railway, has returned to his headquarters in Richmond, after inspecting the yards at Summitt, just beyond Lick Run, and at Silver Grove, above Newport, O.

While in Cincinnati Mr. Stevens stated that by Christmas the Cincinnati Division of the Chesapeake and Ohio will be doubled-tracked, giving Newport News. For the past three years the road has been handling more traffic over a single-track road into the Ohio metropolis than any other road in the United States. By good management it was handled without Traffic Agreement.

Mr. Stevens announced that he had just received advices of the completion of the traffic agreement with the Clover Leaf, by which its through freight to St. Louis and the Southwest will be handled from Marlon, Ind., over the Clover Leaf instead of the Big Four. This new alliance will become effective as soon as tariffs can be arranged.

nouncement that the Chicago Division, as the Chesapeake and Ohlo of Indiana is now known, has been divided into two districts—Wabash District, between Marion, Ind., and Chicago, and the Miami District, between Marion and Cincinnati. The districts will be handled by two trainmasters.

News from Cincinnati is that the attorneys for the Chesapeake and Ohlo and the Hocking Valley have filed their answer to the government's suit against the alleged "soft coal combine," now pending in the United States Circuit Court at Columbus, O. The court will open for the autumn term this week, and it is understood that the defense of the two roads, in a general way, will be similar to suits brought by minority stockholders of the Hocking Valley to restrain the Chesapeake and Ohlo from exercising its control over that road. It will be claimed that the two roads are not appared to appreciate and compensate and that the be claimed that the two roads are not parallel and competing, and that an

In letters received on this side of the Atlantic the bridegroom is described as "a wealthy English nobleman and the shooting companion of the extring of Portugal."

This information is said to have come from Miss Goodrich herself. One of her confidents, Mabel Taliaferro, returned from Paris to-day and confirmed the report.

Miss Goodrich and her baron are now at Biarrite, but her mother, who is stopping at the Hotel de Crillon, in Paris, tells every one that the barones has no intention of returning to America, and will not ask for an injunction against Nat Goodwin, to prevent him from publishing the story of the infelicities, as he has done in the case of Maxine Elliott.

Friends Say Poet and One-Time Wife of Sculptor Will Marry

Greenwich, Conn., September 17 .-Friends of Richard Le Gallienne, the poet and author, heard to-day that the man who has written much about has sometimes talked of his own, is collaborator of many years ago. On of Mr. Le Gallienne and Mrs. Irma Perry is to take place at Mr. Le Galllenne's cottage, in Tokeneke Park, at Darien.

Both the bride and bridegroom-to be have been through the divorce courts, though in different capacities. In 1904 Mrs. Perry obtained a divorce from Roland Hinton Perry, a well-known sculptor. Judge Blanchard, in the Susculptor. Judge Blanchard, in the Su-preme Court of New York, granted her alimony, which has been the cause of much bickering and several court pro-ceedings since, and the custody of the only child of the marriage, Gwen-dolin Perry.

The poet's appearance in the divorce court was the result of a subpoena. He went there to be identified by witnesses in the case of his wife in her application for release by divorce. She was granted an interlocutory decree and the custody of her twelve-year-old daughter in July of this year.
